Welcome to the beautiful, historic Rangeley Lakes of Maine. Known for its fly fishing and sporting camp history, the region is also year-round hotspot for outdoor adventure and wildlife viewing.

Day 1: Rangeley Lake offers myriad coves, islands, and mountain vistas. Rent a boat and stock up on books, maps, and other supplies at Ecopelagicon in Rangeley. Pick up sandwiches, wraps or snacks at Moosely Bagels. Launch at Lakeside Park landing in the center of town and paddle leisurely to the Hunter Cove Wildlife Sanctuary. Stop for a picnic lunch, bird watching, and a hike through the nature trails. Keep an eye out for boreal chickadees and warblers at this point of interest on the Maine Birding Trail. Alternatively, launch at Rangeley Lake State Park and paddle to the tranquil, island-dotted South Bog Cove. Be on the lookout for eagles and blue herons.

If the conditions aren't quite right for a lake paddle, try a gentler paddle on one of the many rivers nearby like the Cupsuptic or the Kennebec. Keep an eye out for moose, especially in the early morning. Canoes, kayaks, and some shuttles are available from River's Edge Sports in Oquossoc. Kayaks, shuttles, and guided kayak tours on lakes and rivers are available from Mookwa Guided Tours in Rangeley.

In the afternoon, hike up nearby Bald Mountain and take in the panoramic view of lakes from the observation tower. Or drive south along Mooselookmeguntic Lake for a hike to 90-ft Angel Falls, the longest single drop in Maine. On your way, take a moment to enjoy Height of Land for an incredible sweeping view of this section of the Northern Forest Canoe Trail.

Dine at the unique Fodor's-recommended Gingerbread House, the Four Seasons Café, or one of the many great restaurants in Rangeley, like Parkside & Main (an American grill), or the Red Onion (fresh dough pizza). In the evening, catch a film or "Celtic Concert" at the local Lakeside Theater, or if you're lucky, fireworks! Check the town schedule for dates (and also to learn about quintessential local strawberry, blueberry, and arts festivals).

Day 2: Experience firsthand why this region is famous for fly fishing, guided by one of the many local experts. Contact the Rangeley Area Chamber of Commerce to find a guide who can customize an outdoor experience for you. Beginners are welcome and gear (rods, ties, waders) can be provided. If fishing is not your thing, local guides are available to take you hiking on local mountain trails, waterfalls, or canoe trips.

Ever heard of a snubbing machine? Or a bateaux? Find out what they are and how they shaped the region's history at the Rangeley Lakes Region Logging Museum. (If you are here in July 2010, join the Northern Forest Canoe Trail and the logging museum for an anniversary festival to celebrate logging and canoeing history!)

Visit the brand-new Rangeley Outdoor Sporting Heritage Museum (opening in mid-2010) and learn about the extraordinary men and women like Cornelia "Fly Rod" Crosby who made the region famous for fishing and tall tales in the early twentieth century.

Pick up sandwiches, pizza, and snacks (or wine and cheese) at Oquossoc Grocery, and enjoy lunch in rocking chairs on the wide old-fashioned porch. Or pop into the BMC Diner or Moosely Bagels in Rangeley.

Visit historic Orgonon, the preserved home and lab of scientist Wilhelm Reich in the 1940's. Nature programs are often offered on Sunday afternoons in July and August. For even more history, visit the Rangeley Public Library, itself on the register of national historic places. While in town, don't miss Rangeley's great shops offering gear, books, quilts, and photos.

If you're a mountain biker, check out the seven miles of Rangeley Lakes Trail Center at the base of Saddleback Mountain. Bikes are available for rent at Rivers' Edge Sports. Round off your day with an afternoon or sunset cruise aboard the "Oquossoc Lady", a 28' antique wooden launch boat from 1947.

A paddler could easily spend a week's vacation in the Rangeley Lakes region, exploring a variety of lakes and ponds, moose watching at dawn and dusk, and exploring hiking trails leading into scenic bogs and up to windswept summits.
